Reasons for using Sherwin Williams

Dry Powdered Arsenate of Lead.

S. W. Dry Powdered Arsenate of Lead is an exceedingly finely divided, fluffy powder which is greater in bulk per given weight than any other powdered Arsenate of Lead on the market.

One pound or 1½ pounds to 50 gallons of water will control leaf-eating insects where heretofore 2, 3 and 4 pounds of the paste material were required. It represents the highest development in American Poisons for fruit tree spraying.

EPIDEMICS VISIT MANY DISTRICTS

Quarantines Placed for Contagious Diseases. Health Officials Busiest for Many Years. No Deaths.

Scarlet fever, measles, mumps, and chicken pox are the combination of ailments scattered over Adams County to such an extent that all records for contagious diseases in this district have been broken. County and township health officers have not been so busy in years and the little yellow tags may be seen in almost every section.

Ten cases of scarlet fever, reported from the vicinity of Seven Stars, have had three houses under quarantine for several weeks. The patients are getting along well and it is expected that the restrictions can be lifted before long. Scarlet fever has also appeared in Mt. Joy, Germany, and Union townships, and in McSherrytown. Vigorous measures of protection have saved a more widespread contagion.

Chicken pox has appeared in a virulent form in the western part of Franklin township. Sufferers there, not knowing the nature of the disease or how it should be treated, have removed the scales with the result that some of them may be marked for life. Tags have been placed here where the sickness has been duly reported by the physicians in charge.

In Berwick and Hamilton townships, and in Abbottstown measles have spread like wild fire until, in the borough of Abbottstown, there were no less than forty cases at one time. It was finally decided to close the churches and schools, and it is believed that a strict observance of the quarantine will have the desired effect. Gettysburg, too, has seen the measles start but the usual vigorous methods are being taken by the local board of health.

Biglerville's campaign against the mumps contagion is working excellently. Only four new cases have been reported since the quarantines were placed and these patients were evidently infected before the precaution was taken. The churches are being thoroughly ventilated and the need of spending approximately $300 for their fumigation avoided through the use of plenty of light and air. Ten days of this treatment will do practically as much good as one day of fumigation, it is believed.

Local health officers, co-operating with Dr. J. R. Dickson, county medical inspector, are doing the actual work of keeping things right, while the boards of health in the boroughs are doing their share.

DRY MEN SURE

York Nominates Three Local Option Candidates for Legislature.

Complete returns in York county show that at least three local option men will go to the state legislature from that district. It is probable that a fourth may be sent since E. S. Hengst, who was defeated by R. S. Spangler, for the Republican nomination, was named on the Washington party ticket.

In the second district William Epley was nominated by the Democrats and C. E. Cook by the Republicans. S. S. Loucks, Democrat, won in the third district. His opponent is S. J. Barnett, Republican. H. E. Lanius, Democrat, was nominated in the fourth district. He is unopposed. Spangler, Republican, and Ettline, Democrat, of York, are the only anti-local option candidates.

PLAN TO ERECT NEW RESIDENCES

Business Men of Town would Provide Houses for Persons not Able to Pay High Rentals. Also after Several Industries.

For the purpose of securing the erection of houses to rent at figures which will be attractive to industrious persons of limited means, the Boosters' Club, organized here about a month ago, is busy devising means to secure the necessary funds.

A need of such houses has been felt for years. Men earning from $8 to $12 weekly cannot afford to occupy houses for which a monthly rental of from $12 to $15 is asked and, as a result, the town is losing desirable residents, for the number of moderately priced houses is far short of the demand. Some men who otherwise would live in town stay in the country, coming several miles daily to their work.

It is intimated that the Boosters' Club will ask a modification of the ordinance prohibiting the erection of frame buildings in the borough, making a "fire zone" in the central portion of the town, where such buildings would continue to be prohibited, but allowing their erection in the less densely built up portions. Brick houses cannot be built to rent profitably at low figures and the action will be asked to meet this condition.

Already the Boosters' Club has lines out for industries and the fact that homes can be provided for the workers will be a strong argument toward securing them. It is the plan to have the houses built of modest, though comfortable, design, and to make the surroundings as attractive as possible.

The club numbers in its membership fifty aggressive and substantial business men of town, the most successful in all lines of mercantile endeavor being included in the roll. Meetings have been held weekly, but no effort has been made to secure publicity. The officers elected and now directing the affairs of the organization are: president, Frank R. Peckman; vice presidents, Roy P. Funkhouser and J. Frank Hartman; secretary, George C. Fissel; treasurer, Howard C. Hartley.

The organization, it is understood, will do little toward the securing of tourist traffic for the town, that being a minor consideration, instead of a main one, as was apparently the motive of the now defunct merchants association, and board of trade.

GRANT DIPLOMAS

Close of Three Years' Course for Young Seminarians.

Sixteen young ministerial students received diplomas at the graduation exercises of the Lutheran Theological Seminary in College Church Thursday evening. Dr. H. C. Alleman delivered the baccalaureate sermon and Dr. J. A. Singmaster presented diplomas to the following:

C. M. Coffelt, of Woodstock, Va.; J. H. Hedge, of Williamson; M. Luther Hooker, of Middletown; Jacob R. Nicholas, of Easton; Clinton Ritz, of Red Lion; Clifford S. Roberts, of Berlin, Ontario; John B. Rupley, of Oberlin; David L. Shaffer, of Johnstown; John W. Wolf, of Maytown; Benton F. Rudisill, of Gettysburg; Robert E. Fortenbaugh, of Harrisburg; John Gruver, of York; G. Robert Heim, of Loysville; Paul Y. Livingston, of York; and Ernest L. Pee, of Everett.

FRANCIS A. BRADY

Funeral on Monday Morning from Conewago Chapel.

Francis A. Brady died Thursday morning at four o'clock at the home of his father, A. F. Brady, near Lilly's Mill, Oxford township, from a complication of diseases from which he had been ill for several years. He was aged 39 years, 8 months and 17 days.

Besides his father he is survived by one sister, Miss Katie, at home.

Funeral on Monday morning with short services at the house at 8 o'clock and further services in Conewago Chapel cemetery.

BOROUGH BURNS REDEEMED BONDS

Water Plant Debt is Paid at New Oxford and Match is Applied to the Paper Issued Twenty Years ago.

The New Oxford borough council had an interesting session this week when they burned 146 water bonds issued in 1896, all of which have been redeemed. Secretary Bowers, Burgess Hummer, and President Livingston checked up the bonds and found that all were there after which the match was applied and the ceremony completed.

William Himes presented a petition to council which was signed by the majority of property holders on Lincoln Way East and West. The petition stated that the signers must pay at the rate of five cents per square foot according to the frontage, as part payment for the street being swept, oiled and sanded. Theodore Warner presented a similar petition for the residents along part of Hanover street. The subscription of his signers amounted to within about $200 of covering the cost for treating the entire street.

It was decided that Lincoln Way East and West should be oiled for a width of twenty feet, taken from the residence of William Feiser to the mill road on the West, and also Hanover street to be oiled as far as the petition called for, and that the work be done with tarvia by the Barber Co., providing that the amount subscribed be paid to the borough by May 20th. It was estimated that the total cost for Lincoln Way East and West would be $450.00 of which $240.00 was subscribed on the petition. The balance was to be paid from the borough treasury. It would be necessary for the borough to repair all the bad places in the street, making same level before the work would be started.

It was decided that twelve tons of sand be purchased from the American Water Softener Company to be used in the filter bed at the water plant, as advised by Dr. Dixon.

DEER HUNT

Day in the Woods for Girls and Boys.

The Camp Fire Girls and Boy Scouts of town will meet on the St. James church steps to-morrow afternoon at 1:30. Each member is requested to bring a small saucepan, a fork, bacon, eggs, bread and butter, potato chips and fruit. The party, led by Scoutmaster Wagner will take the East Confederate avenue to Spangler's Spring, thence to McAlister's farmhouse, across Rock Creek and up Wolf Hill to the hermit's cabin at the summit. From this spot, the meeting-place, each group will be sent, in turn, on a deer hunt, following a track made by the print of deer hoofs. The two camp fires or groups of Scouts making the best time in locating the deer and bringing it back will receive useful and attractive prizes. Two individual prizes also will be awarded. Supper will be cooked at five o'clock and a camp fire lighted at six. The party will start back at seven. All girls or scouts who have received no other notice than this are expected to attend.

DROP JAMISON

Another Cut from the Staff of Ponies' Pitchers.

This morning Manager Ira Plank released Jamison, the pitcher whom he signed recently and who pitched against Chambersburg on Wednesday. Jamison put up a fairly good article of ball but Plank felt that he was the weakest man on the staff and one had to be let go. Ira went to Martinsburg to-day to be with the team for the two-day stay in that town. He will make his best efforts to break up Martinsburg's winning streak and to retrieve the fortunes of the Ponies.

FINE EXHIBIT OF MANUAL TRAINING

High School Displays Work of the Present Year, Showing Marked Advancement in the Course. Fine Furniture.

Persons who took advantage of the invitation to view the exhibit of the high school manual training department were surprised and delighted to-day to see the rapid strides in the work done during the past eight months.

In the main entrance hall of the building there is grouped a collection of furniture, made entirely by the boys of the school, that would do credit to the manual training department of a big city school. Massive tables, tastefully designed book racks, taboretts, clothes trees, piano benches, shelves, stands, and many other articles have been made with the utmost care and precision until there are gathered many pieces of furniture that would retail at figures really worth while.

Porch swings, under construction and nearly finished, are shown that might find ready sale in any store. The staining is done by the pupils and the completed work is on display. An interesting fact in connection with the exhibit is the explanation of the system by which all the things made remain the actual property of the pupils. They purchase the lumber and convert it into the various articles. As a result, not a few homes of town will be beautified by things made by the boys while at their school work,—things which in themselves are beautiful and at the same time have a sentimental value that cannot be estimated.

The exhibit will remain in place on Saturday and any who care to see the work may do so. Prof. C. A. Leininger, who heads the manual training department, is justly proud of the results of his labor and that of his pupils.

BURGESS PROCLAIMS

And Arendtsville will Put Streets in Fine Repair.

Arendtsville is Adams County's first community to take definite action looking toward the observance of Good Roads' Day next Thursday, May 25th. P. S. Orner, the burgess, to-day issued a proclamation calling upon all taxpayers and good citizens to present themselves for work on the borough streets on that day. Teams will also be needed and a program of work carried out that will put the highways of the town in first class condition. The citizens are expected to respond willingly to the call and the town will do its full share.

By a mere coincidence Burgess Eicholtz, of Gettysburg, picked upon Good Roads Day as the time for the annual clean-up of the town but he now suggests that the affair take the nature of a double observance. Persons may help out in the plan by cleaning-up the streets in front of their houses and general assistance in carrying out the idea will mean a marked change in the appearance of things.

DOG UPSETS CAR

Steering Wheel Breaks and Machine Goes over an Embankment.

While driving his Ford car from York Springs to New Oxford, William McClure, a traveling salesman for the Lefean Candy Co., York, hit a large dog on the Carlisle pike. The impact broke the steering wheel of the machine and Mr. McClure lost control of the car which went over an embankment. The rear wheel of the car was demolished and other parts of the machine broken. He was hurled against the steering wheel and received minor cuts and bruises. Mr. McClure and his disabled car were taken to New Oxford, where he is registered at a hotel, while his car is being repaired.

SELECTED TO ATTEND SYNOD

Gettysburg Men and Others Chosen to Go to Meeting at Dayton. Biglerville Church Gets $1000.

Rev. T. C. Hesson, of Arendtsville; Elder H. T. Weaver, of Gettysburg; Elder Elmer Buckley, of Littlestown; and Rev. Abner S. Dechant, of Hanover, were elected regular delegates to the general synod of the Reformed church, which convenes in May, 1917, at Dayton, O., by Gettysburg Classis at Spring Grove this week.

The alternate delegates are: Rev. J. N. Faust, of Spring Grove; Rev. Irvin S. Ditzler, of East Berlin; Elders A. R. Brodbeck, and S. E. Waltman, of Hanover. Rev. M. J. Roth, of Hanover, was elected to the board of trustees of classis for a period of five years, and Rev. W. E. Garrett, of New Oxford, was chosen a member of the committee on sustentation of classis. Elder Harvey Swartz was reappointed conference superintendent of teacher training, and was re-elected as representative to the general synod board of ministerial relief.

Rev. Stuart Hartman, superintendent of the Hoffman Reformed orphanage at Littlestown, in a brief address expressed his gratitude for the assistance given by the classis to the orphanage. He stated that 35 boys and girls are being cared for at the present time and owing to the lack of quarters no further applications for admittance would be considered.

The committee on benevolent institutions recommended to classis that the pastors of the congregations challenge the people to increase the contributions so that new buildings may be erected for the care of additional orphans. The recommendation was adopted.

Aid to the extent of $1,000 was apportioned to the Biglerville congregation.

Classis at its closing session took steps toward the purchase of the lot and burial grounds of Rev. Jacob Lischy, one of the early fathers of the Reformed church, located in York county, a half mile east of the church in which the body held its sessions. The clergy and elders visited the grave in a body. Rev. Mr. Lischy's death occurred while he was supplying Lischy's church in 1781.

CHARLES E. SWEENEY

Unprovoked Attack Fatal to Former Gettysburg Newspaper Man.

From the wounds received last Sunday when he was shot three times by a negro on the streets of Louisville, Kentucky, Charles E. Sweeney, formerly of Gettysburg, died in a hospital on Thursday. He was attacked when he unintentionally bumped into the negro and two women while rounding a corner. The three colored persons are in jail. As a final effort to save Mr. Sweeney's life, an operation was performed but it only revealed the hopelessness of his case. He leaves his parents and a sister, all residing in York. Mr. Sweeney was engaged on one of the local newspapers several years ago.

BRITISH KNEW REVOLT PLANS

But the Government Feared to Act.

MONEY FROM AMERICA

Was Used to Purchase Arms and Spread Sedition—Thought Plot Would Blow Over.

London, May 19.—The government knew of the preparations for the Irish uprising with help from German sources, it did not take any steps to prevent it, for fear of causing bloodshed, Sir Matthew Nathan, formerly under secretary for Ireland, testified before the royal commission to inquire into the Irish rebellion.

It was known that the revolutionists were armed and drilled, and even were conducting sham battle attacks on Dublin castle.

Sir Matthew caused more surprise by stating that he had communicated on two occasions with the Irish leaders, John Redmond, John Dillon and Joseph Doulin, in regard to the condition of affairs in Ireland, but nothing had been done, the authorities believing there would be more bloodshed in attempting to disarm the volunteers than in watching for the first sign of an outbreak and promptly suppressing it.

The government had received advice, said Sir Matthew, that an attempt would be made to land arms in Ireland from German submarines; also that rifles had been purchased from Irish soldiers on home leave, while others had been taken into the country in passengers' baggage.

The former under secretary gave this testimony in the course of a long statement outlining the formation of the National volunteers, of which he declared a small section only had shown themselves disloyal. The leaders of the movement, he said, directed their efforts to securing more rifles and ammunition and to storing as large an amount of material as possible. This was where the real danger came from, he added, as it was felt that an attempt at disarmament might lead to bloodshed.

The executives in Ireland being in possession of sufficient evidence of the association of the movement's leaders with a foreign enemy, continued Sir Matthew, had decided upon their arrest and were discussing the matter on April 24, when the rebellion broke out. He defended the failure of the government to disarm the volunteers on the ground that such action might have alienated the sympathies of many loyal volunteers, and added: "There are 25,000 Irish Catholics enlisted in the army."

Considerable sums of money, he said, had been coming from America, the funds being used for the purchase of arms and the printing of seditious papers. It was estimated, he added, that $80,000 had been received from America and paid into Dublin banks from the middle of September, 1914, to the following April, when the money was withdrawn.

The police estimated before the outbreak that the volunteers had about 1800 rifles, pistols and other firearms and that there was 825 rifles in Dublin. Explosives had also been found in different parts of the country, he said. Baron Hardinge asked Sir Matthew why no action had been taken to prevent drilling because we were afraid to enforce the act," Sir Matthew said. "We deterred practically for political purposes."

MEXICANS KILL U. S. SOLDIER

Caranza Commander Declares He Was Intoxicated and Shot First.

El Paso, Tex., May 19.—An American soldier, who crossed the international boundary a mile and a half east of Juarez, was shot and killed by Mexican customs guards.

General Gavira, Caranza commander in Juarez, advised Brigadier General Bell that the American was intoxicated and fired on the Mexicans before they shot him.

General Bell detailed two officers to go to Juarez and, with two officers assigned by General Gavira and the Mexican military judge, to begin an investigation of the shooting.

General Gavira said that although American soldiers witnessed the shooting they made no attempt to return the fire of the Mexican guards.

GOVERNOR KEEPS LEAD IN CONTEST

Brumbaugh Heads the Delegate List.

Philadelphia, May 19.—Revised returns from Tuesday's primary gave Governor Brumbaugh a lead of more than 7000 votes over Senator Penrose in the state fight for Republican delegate-at-large. Senator Oliver still maintained third position, with Mayor Smith fourth.

The figures from 1904 districts out of 6891 in the state, gave:
Brumbaugh 148,881
Oliver 130,587
Penrose 141,123
Smith 122,637

Senator Snyder increased his lead over Speaker Ambler for the Republican nomination for auditor general. Returns from 5573 districts in the state gave:
Ambler 166,818
Snyder 185,797

John R. K. Scott, on the Brumbaugh side, has a good lead for Republican congressman-at-large, with McLaughlin and Sobel, Penrose men, vying for second place and nomination. The figures from 1630 districts are:
Lafean 111,344
McLaughlin 122,555
Sobel 129,903
Scott 142,529

Returns from 4266 districts out of 6891 in the state for Democratic national committeeman, give:
Liebel 33,835
Palmer 53,894

Votes Cost $12.50 Each.

Harrisburg, Pa., May 19.—The Rush township election officers filed an election expense account amounting to $51.20 with the Dauphin county commissioners. Just four votes were cast, two Republicans and two Democrats, making the total expense to the county for the casting of each vote $12.50.

HELD ON BRIBERY CHARGES

Revenue Collector Alleged to Have Made $50 a Week in "Tips."

New York, May 19.—Christopher J. Fortman, for more than ten years a deputy internal revenue collector, was arrested by the federal authorities on a warrant charging him with demanding and accepting bribes from tobacco dealers in return for making false reports to the government. His hearing was set for June 2.

For more than ten years, Assistant District Attorney McDonald charges, Fortman had collected an average of fifty dollars a week in "tips" from the tobacco men.

His duty was to collect the returns made by about one hundred dealers. Fortman, the government alleges, without making an inventory certified the dealers' returns and received for this service "tips" of one or two dollars from each dealer.

Three German Vessels Sunk.

London, May 19.—The sinking of two German steamships by a submarine, believed to be a Russian one, is reported in a Reuter despatch from Stockholm. The steamships were the Kolga, Hamburg for Stockholm, and the Bianca. A despatch to the Central News also reports the torpedoing of the German vessel Heras in the Baltic by a British submarine.

Troops Guard Confiscated Liquor.

Mobile, Ala., May 19.—All Russell county is under martial law, with the arrival of state troops to guard $400,000 of liquor confiscated in raids by state officials. Authorities of the county reported themselves unable to care for the situation.

WARNED TO OBEY AMERICAN LAWS

Official Admonition Given Germans in U. S.

TRANSMITTED BY AMBASSADOR

Berlin Aims to Discourage Plots and Alleged Violations of United States Neutrality.

Washington, May 19.—Germany, through Count von Bernstorff, its ambassador here, has instructed all German consuls in the United States to admonish German citizens in their districts scrupulously to observe American laws.

This was done in an effort to end various alleged violations of American neutrality.

The ambassador acted on instructions from the Berlin foreign office. The action was announced in this official statement from the German embassy:

"In consequence of cases which have occurred of late, the German ambassador has sent instructions to all German consuls in the United States to strongly impress upon German citizens living in their districts that it is their duty scrupulously to obey the laws of the state in which they reside."

It was said at the German embassy that the instructions were designed to prevent plots or lawlessness on the part of German citizens who might be disposed to engage in such. The German government, it was said, looks with great disfavor upon any such conduct and desires that they shall not engage in any undertaking in any way outside the law.

It was not disclosed whether specific cases have been brought to the attention of the German government, but it was made clear that Berlin officials want the United States and its people to understand that they have not countenanced any illegal affairs with which German citizens or sympathizers in this country have been connected.

Count von Bernstorff's instructions were received and were forwarded to German consuls immediately.

Administration officials were much interested in the statement issued by the embassy and expressed themselves as much pleased.

It was said the instructions to German consuls were not the result of any action by the United States. Officials thought the step might do much to relieve troublesome conditions which have manifested themselves almost since the beginning of the war.

It is understood that Berlin foreign office learned that public opinion in this country was being affected by activities of sympathizers concerned in passport frauds, bomb plots and similar operations.

It is thought possible that no new German military or naval attaches will come to the United States before the end of the war, because German officials feel they would be subject to suspicion and the German government is represented as desirous of putting an end to activities objectionable to the United States.

FOR FIVE BATTLE CRUISERS

House Committee Votes to Discard Five-Year Navy Plan.

Washington, May 19.—In deciding upon the increase of the navy, the house naval committee voted to abandon the five-year building program, recommended by Secretary of the Navy Daniels, and to recommend that five battle cruisers, to cost $20,433,531 each; four scout cruisers, ten torpedo boat destroyers, twenty submarines, one hospital ship, one oil supply ship and one ammunition supply ship be built during the 1917 fiscal year.

The committee voted thirteen to eight on battle cruisers and submarines.

Secretary Daniels had recommended as the first year's apportionment of the proposed five-year program two dreadnoughts, two battle cruisers, three scout cruisers, fifteen destroyers, one gun boat and one hospital ship. As to submarines, difference of opinion had arisen as to the type to be constructed, and Secretary Daniels altered his original plan of five fleet submarines and twenty-five coast submarines.

The committee struck out the battleships, the gunboat and five destroyers, but added three battle cruisers, one scout cruiser, one ammunition ship and one oil fuel ship.

CONVICT AMERICAN IN IRISH REVOLT

Jeremiah Lynch, of New York, Found Guilty.

London, May 19.—Jeremiah Lynch, of New York, has been tried and convicted by a court-martial in Dublin on a charge of participating in the Irish revolt.

The sentence was to be pronounced, but no word has been received by the American embassy as to what sentence was imposed.

The news that Lynch had been convicted was received by the embassy from the American consul in Dublin. Previous to this the last news the embassy had of Lynch was that under the defence of the realm act he was prohibited from leaving the five-mile zone of Dublin. This provision, as a rule, applies to hostile aliens, but can be extended to friendly aliens. It was extended to Lynch as he had been making trips to western Ireland. Lynch has been a resident of Dublin for some time.

Timothy Healy said, in the house of commons that he understood James M. Sullivan, former American minister to the Dominican Republic, had been kept in jail in Ireland for eight days without any charge being lodged against him. When he was finally released, Mr. Healy said, no apology was made. Mr. Healy asked the foreign secretary, Mr. Grey, to "ascertain what explanation was offered by General Maxwell (the British commander in Ireland) for the vigorous treatment to which Mr. Sullivan was subjected."

Mr. Grey said the United States had brought to the notice of Great Britain the detention of Mr. Sullivan, who was arrested in Dublin on April 30. It was understood at the time that he was charged with complicity in the revolt.

MAYO TO SUCCEED FLETCHER

Officer Who Ordered Flag Salute to Command Atlantic Fleet.

Washington, May 19.—Plans for reorganization of the Atlantic fleet, which will be announced soon by Secretary of the Navy Daniels, include the retirement of Admiral Fletcher as commander in chief.

Vice Admiral Henry T. Mayo, now commander of the first division of the fleet, with his flag on the Arkansas, will succeed Admiral Fletcher as commander in chief. Admiral Fletcher automatically returns to his line rank of rear admiral, and probably will be assigned to important strategic work.

It was Admiral Mayo, who, when in command of the American fleet at Tampico, early in 1914, demanded that Mexico salute the flag, refused to do which led to the occupation of Vera Cruz by United States forces, and the ultimate downfall of Huerta.

Vaccinated Seaford Child Dying.

Seaford, Del., May 19.—Alice, the four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Neal, of West Seaford, is lying at the point of death, as a result it is said of vaccination. Shortly after the child was vaccinated a few days ago, it became violently ill and has been growing weaker daily.

T. R. to Invade Ford's Home City.

New York, May 19.—Colonel Roosevelt left Oyster Bay to carry a message of preparedness to the home of Henry Ford, the pacifist. He will speak in Detroit and doesn't expect to mince any words in telling what he thinks of the automobile king's views.

DR. MARQUIS CHOSEN NEW MODERATOR

Presbyterian Assembly Elects Iowa Clergyman.

Atlantic City, May 19.—The Rev. Dr. John A. Marquis, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, was elected moderator of the 128th general assembly of the Presbyterian church in the United States of America, on the second ballot at the assembly session here.

Dr. Marquis received 616 votes, and the Rev. Dr. W. L. McEwan 237. The whole number cast was 853; necessary to elect, 427.

Dr. Marquis was escorted to the platform in a storm of applause.

On the first ballot Dr. Marquis failed by two votes of the majority needed to elect. The official announcement was: Total number of votes cast, 883; necessary to elect, 432; for Dr. Marquis, 430; for Dr. McEwan, 274; for Dr. Robinson, 159.

Dr. Robinson then withdrew in favor of Dr. Marquis.

The big hall on the Steel Pier was jammed to its capacity when the session began. After the opening prayer, two gavel, one from the Presbyterians of Washington county, Pennsylvania, were presented to the retiring moderator, Dr. Stevenson, the Rev. W. J. Hogue making the presentation speech. Then the assembly settled down to the important business of electing its new moderator.

TRENTON CARMEN STRIKE

The Trolleyman Quit as the Conference Ends.

Trenton, May 19.—A general strike of the employees of the Trenton and Mercer County Traction company was called last night.

Refusal of the company to reinstate about fourteen trolleyman, dismissed for alleged embezzlement of fares, is the cause of the walkout. Conference committees of the company and the local trolleyman's union met in an endeavor to straighten out the differences, but to no avail.

It was apparent after the conference that the strike would be ordered. The executive board of the carmen held another conference and decided to order the walk-out after the factories closed for the day.

The trolleyman brought their cars to the center of the city and returned them to the trolley barns. About 330 men are involved.

REAL BASE BALL

Former Stars and Coming Ones in this Game.

Two hundred persons, yielding a total collection of $5.00, enjoyed the Printers—County Officials frolic on the Kurtz Playground Thursday evening, won by the former with a 4-3 score. District Attorney Topper and Deputy Sheriff Hartman did the pitching for the Court House crowd while Oyster was in the box for the typists. Numerous errors and frequent hitting, a few unexpected plays, and some original plays contributed to the fun. The officials put one over on their opponents when they appeared in uniforms—the new khaki overalls bought for the use of prisoners at the jail. J. Donald Swope, armed with a revolver, was arbiter for the game.

SAW WOMAN LEAD SINN FEIN REVOLT

Australian Doctor Tells of Riots and Fighting in Dublin.

HELD SIX DAYS IN HOTEL

Describes How Countess Markievicz, With Man's Uniform and Two Revolvers, Urged the Revolutionists on and on—Says He Faced More Danger There Than in Gallipoli Trenches.

A frenzied woman on fire with rebellion, with a brace of revolvers strapped over the man's uniform, she was the head of a mob of Sinn Fein rioters surging through Stephens Green, Dublin, urging them to battle—the picture of Countess Markievicz, the Irish rebel leader, drawn by Dr. Cecil G. McAdam of Melbourne, Australia, when he arrived in New York. The doctor was one of eighty guests lodged for six days in the Hotel Shelbourne, Dublin. Peering through one of the hotel windows, as chaos shattered by the hail of bullets and its casements riddled with lead, he saw the rebel countess leading the attack.

Her leadership, the doctor learned, was supreme. In one night of wild fighting, he was told, she shot down six of her own followers for disobeying her orders.

Gallipoli Safe by Comparison.

Dr. McAdam is returning on sick leave after service with the British royal medical corps in the Gallipoli campaign. He declared that he had more narrow escapes in the Irish capital than at the front.

When the fighting first broke out the doctor was walking in one of Dublin's parks. At the first shot he saw dozens of transfer drivers desert their posts, leaving their cars standing in the streets. Most of them ran toward the riot center, drawing revolvers as they ran. The cars were many of them used later as barricades.

"I got back to my hotel just in time," the doctor said. "There were about eighty guests there, among them, I think, two American actors. I do not remember their names.

"For six days we were besieged by the rebels and during the height of the fighting were under constant fire. The windows were shot out and several times the rebels tried to set fire to the hotel.

Countess Armed, in Male Uniform.

"Countess Markievicz seemed to be leading the revolt. I saw her myself, dressed in man's clothes, something like a uniform, ordering the rebel at the hotel. She had two big revolvers strapped on.

"We saw the burning of Sackville street—a terrible sight, but one of awful beauty at night. A gunboat got up the river as far as the custom house, and I watched it shelling Liberty hall. The destruction was terrible.

"They took many of the wounded to a monastery near our hotel. I managed to get out about the fourth or fifth day of the fighting and get over to help other physicians with the wounded. Even at the monastery we were constantly exposed to fire. I came closer to death there more times than I did at the Gallipoli front."

HUGE DAM IS COMPLETED.

New Mexico Reclamation Project Will Form Greatest Reservoir.

Work was completed at Elephant Butte, N. M., on the Elephant Butte dam, a United States reclamation service project which by damming the Rio Grande forms the greatest storage reservoir in the world. Construction began five years ago. The reservoir will feed an irrigation system that will water 185,000 acres of land in New Mexico, Texas and Mexico.

The dam blocks a canyon of the Rio Grande 120 miles north of El Paso. It is the fifth of the government's big irrigation projects and will store the entire flow and flood of the river. The reservoir will hold 115,000,000,000 cubic feet of water, which reclamation service experts say would cover the state of Delaware to a depth of two feet.

The dam stands 318 feet high and 1,674 feet long. It provides a roadway across the canyon sixteen feet wide and at its base is 255 feet thick.

PREMIUM FOR WAR BABIES.

Murich Factory Offers $25 For Each Child, Boy or Girl.

Twenty-five dollars for "war babies" to fill the gaps made by cannon, machine guns, rifles, bayonets and hand grenades is the premium offered by a Munich motor factory.

The firm announces that it will pay that premium to every woman in its employ or to the wife of an employee who presents the fatherland with a future defender or war nurse during 1916. The premium will be paid until six months after peace shall have been declared.

Bulldog a Bank Messenger.

John C. McGraw of Shippensburg, Pa., has a bulldog called Bill, which he uses as a bank messenger. Every time Mr. McGraw wishes to make a deposit he puts the banknotes and the checks or currency into Bill's mouth and lets him take them to the bank. Bill has never lost any money intrusted to him, nor has any one ever tried to rob him.

Some Queer Ones

Hog with six legs owned by California man uses all of them in walking.

Borrowing $10 from friend, San Francisco man bought revolver with it and killed him.

Baby born in Georgia cemetery and buried alive by mother rescued eleven hours later and is doing fine.

When town authorities objected to poster of Wisconsin theater, owners put real overalls on the billboard figures.

Philadelphia zoo keeper dropped keys on locking himself in ostrich cage, and Gertrude swallowed them. Place deserted, he had to fight off ostrich two hours before rescued.

Husky schoolboy in Pittsburgh, Pa., threatened to duck teacher in watering trough because she ordered him to write a composition, but she heated a poker red hot and made him write it.

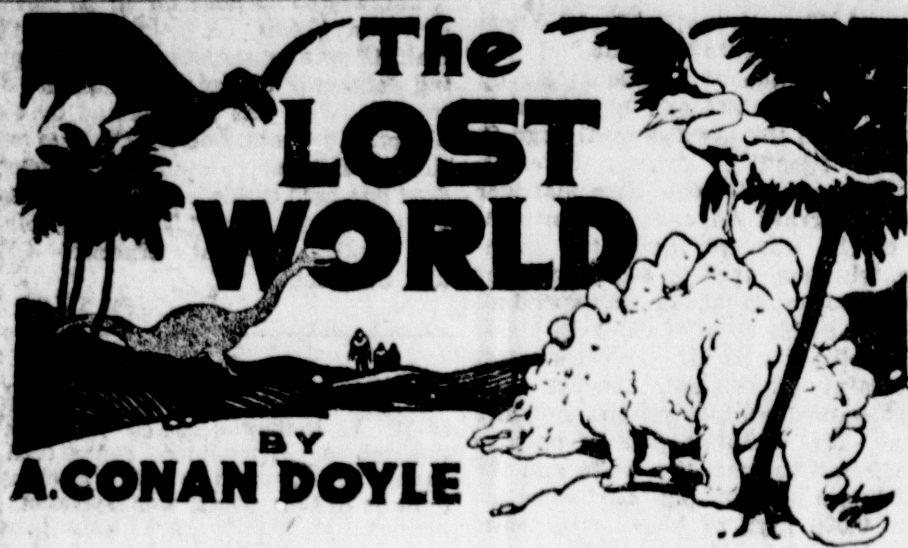

FATE OF THE CHILDREN WORST OF WAR'S HORRORS

Young Boys Drilled to Become Soldiers of the Future.

"Of all the world's children the most fortunate are the happy, care free children of America. From the White sea to the Black, from the plains of Poland to the English channel children have watched the battles of this war with fear and shrinking or have wandered homeless in tears and suffering. Orphaned and desolate children, too little and too weak to speak for themselves, have died by thousands, killed by hunger and cold and war.

Will the war spoil the kiddies? Ah over Europe play is all of enemies, hatred and crude brutality.

In Germany the schools are the supply department of the army. The children are compelled by law to undergo physical training of semi-military character. Said General von Wachs, addressing 18,000 Berlin boy scouts:

CHAPTER XVI.
A Terrifying Sight.

AND suddenly there came something to remind me of my absent companions. In the clear, still morning air there sounded far away the sharp, hard note of a single rifle shot. I paused and listened, but there was nothing more. For a moment I was shocked at the thought that some sudden danger might have befallen them. But then a simpler and more natural explanation came to my mind. It was now broad daylight. No doubt my absence had been noticed. They had imagined that I was lost in the woods and had fired this shot to guide me home. It is true that we had made a strict resolution against firing, but if it seemed to them that I might be in danger they would not hesitate. It was for me now to hurry on as fast as possible and so to reassure them.

I was weary and spent, so my progress was not so fast as I wished, but at last I came into regions which I knew. There was the swamp of the pterodactyls upon my left; there in front of me was the glade of the iguanodons. Now I was in the last belt of trees which separated me from Fort Challenger. I raised my voice in a cheery shout to allay their fears. No answering greeting came back to me. My heart sank at that ominous stillness. I quickened my pace into a run. The zebra rose before me, as I had left it, but the gate was open. I rushed in. In the cold morning light it was a fearful sight which met my eyes. Our effects were scattered in wild confusion over the ground; my comrades had disappeared, and close to the smoldering ashes of our fire the glass was stained crimson with a hideous pool of blood.

I was so stunned by this sudden shock that for a time I must have nearly lost my reason. I have a vague recollection, as one remembers a bad dream, of rushing about through the woods all around the empty camp, calling wildly for my companions. No answer came back from the silent shadows. After a long period, during which I sat in bewilderment, I set myself to try to discover what sudden misfortune could have befallen them. The whole disordered appearance of the camp showed that there had been some sort of attack, and the rifle shot no doubt marked the time when it had occurred. That there should have been only one shot showed that it had been all over in an instant. The rifles still lay upon the ground, and one of them—Lord John's—had the empty cartridge in the breech. The blankets of Challenger and of Summerlee beside the fire suggested that they had been asleep at the time. The cases of ammunition and of food were scattered about in a wild litter, together with our unfortunate cameras and plate carriers, but none of them were missing. On the other hand, all the exposed provisions—and I remembered that there were a considerable quantity of them—were gone. They were animals, then, and not natives, who had made the inroad, for surely the latter would have left nothing behind.

Suddenly a thought came to me and brought some little comfort to my heart. I was not absolutely alone in the world. Down at the bottom of the cliff and within call of me was waiting the faithful Zambo. I went to the edge of the plateau and looked over. Sure enough, he was squatting among his blankets beside his fire in his little camp. But, to my amazement, a second man was seated in front of him. For an instant my heart leaped for joy as I thought that one of my comrades had made his way safely down. But a second glance dispelled the hope. The rising sun shone red upon the man's skin. He was an Indian. I shouted loudly and waved my handkerchief. Presently Zambo looked up, waved his hand and turned to ascend the pinnacle. In a short time he was standing close to me and listening with deep distress to the story which I told him.

"Devil got them for sure, Massa Malone," said he. "You got into the devil's country, sah, and he take you all to himself. You take advice, Massa Malone, and come down quick, else he get you as well."

"How can I come down, Zambo?" "You get creepers from trees, Massa Malone. Throw them over here. I make fast to this stump, and so you have bridge."

"We have thought of that. There are no creepers here which could bear us." "Send for ropes, Massa Malone." "Who can I send and where?" "Send to Indian villages, sah. Plenty hide rope in Indian village. Indian down below; send him."

"Who is he?" "One of our Indians. Other ones beat him and take away his pay. He come back to us. Ready now to take letter, bring rope—anything."

"To take a letter? Why not? Perhaps he might bring help, but in any case he would insure that our lives were not spent for nothing and that news of all that we had won for science should reach our friends at home. I had two compasses, letters, already waiting. I would spend the day in writing a third, which would bring my experiences absolutely up to date. The Indian could bear this back to the world. I ordered Zambo, therefore, to come again in the evening, and I spent my miserable and lonely day in recording my own adventures of the night before. I also drew up a note, to be given to any white merchant or captain of a steamer whom the Indian could find, imploring them to see that ropes were sent to us, since our lives must depend upon it. These documents I threw to Zambo in the evening, and also my purse, which contained three English sovereigns. These were to be given to the Indian, and he was promised twice as much if he returned with the ropes.

Just as the sun was setting upon that melancholy night I saw the lonely figure of the Indian upon the vast plain beneath me, and I watched him, our one faint hope of salvation, until he disappeared in the rising mists of evening which lay rose tinted from the setting sun between the faroff river and me.

It was an awesome thing to sleep in that ill-fated camp, and yet it was even more unnerving to do so in the jungle. One or the other it must be. Prudence, on the one hand, warned me that I should remain on guard, but exhausted nature, on the other, declared that I should do nothing of the kind. I climbed up on to a limb of the great ginkgo tree, but there was no secure perch on its rounded surface, and I should certainly have fallen off and broken my neck the moment I began to doze. I got down, therefore, and pondered over what I should do. Finally I closed the door of the zebra, lit three separate fires in a triangle and, having eaten a hearty supper, dropped off into a profound sleep, from which I had a strange and most welcome awakening. In the early morning, just as day was breaking, a hand was laid upon my arm, and, starting up with all my nerves in a tingle and "Quick, young fellow! Quick!" he cried. "Every moment counts."

My hand feeling for a rifle, I gave a cry of joy as in the cold gray light I saw Lord John Roston kneeling beside me.

It was he, and yet, it was not he. I had left him calm in his bearing, correct in his person, prim in his dress. Now he was pale and wild eyed, gasping as he breathed like one who has run far and fast. His gaunt face was scratched and bloody, his clothes were hanging in rags, and his hat was gone. I stared in amazement, but he gave me no chance for questions. He was grabbing at our stores all the time he spoke.

"Quick, young fellow! Quick!" he cried. "Every moment counts. Get the rifles, both of them. I have the other two. Now all the cartridges you can gather. Fill up your pockets. Now, some food. Half a dozen tins will do. That's all right! Don't wait to talk or think. Get a move on or we are done!"

Still half awake and unable to imagine what it all might mean, I found myself hurrying madly after him through the wood, a rifle under each arm and a pile of various stores in my hands. He dodged in and out through the thickest of the scrub until he came to a dense clump of brushwood. Into this he rushed, regardless of thorns, and threw himself into the heart of it, pulling me down by his side.

"There," he panted. "I think we are safe here. They'll make for the camp as sure as fate. It will be their first idea. But this should puzzle 'em."

"What is it all?" I asked when I had got my breath. "Where are the professors, and who is it that is after us?"

"The ape men!" he cried. "My God, what brutes! Don't raise your voice, for they have long ears—sharp eyes, too, but no power of sight, so far as I could judge, so I don't think they can sniff us out. Where have you been, young fellow? You were well out of it."

In a few sentences I whispered what I had done. Then he told what had happened in my absence.

"It was in the early mornin'. Our learned friends were just stirrin'. Hadn't even begun to argue yet. Suddenly it rained apes. They came down as thick as apples out of a tree. They had been assemblin' in the dark, I suppose, until that great tree over our heads was heavy with them. I shot one of them through the belly, but before we knew where we were they had us spread eagled on our backs. I call them apes, but they carried sticks and stones in their hands and jabbered talk to each other and ended up by tryin' our hands with creepers, so they are ahead of any beast that I have seen in my wanderin'. Ape men—that's what they are—missin' links, and I wish they had stayed missin'. They carried off their wounded comrade—he was bleedin' like a pig—and then they sat around us, and if ever I saw frozen murder it was in their faces. They were big fellows, as big as a man and a deal stronger. Curious glassy gray eyes they have, under red tufts, and they just sat and gloated and gloated. Challenger was no chicken, but even he was cowed. He managed to struggle to his feet, and yelled out at them to have done with it and get it over. I think he had gone a bit off his head at the suddenness of it, for he raged and cursed at them like a lunatic. If they had been a row of his favorite press men he could not have slugged them worse."

"I thought it was the end of us, but instead of that it started them on a new line. They all jabbered and chattered together. Then one of them stood out beside Challenger. You'll smile, young fellow, but 'pon my word they might have been khismen. I couldn't have believed it if I hadn't seen it with my own eyes. This ape man—he was their chief, was a sort of red Challenger, with every one of our friend's beauty points, only just a trifle more so. He had the short body, the big shoulders, the round chest, no mark a great ruddy frill of a beard, the tufted eyebrows, the 'What do you want, hang you!' look about the eyes, and the whole catalogue. When the ape man stood by Challenger and put his paw on his shoulder the thing was complete. Summerlee was a bit hysterical, and he laughed till he cried. The ape men laughed, too, of at least they put up the devil of a cacklin', and they set to work to drag us off through the forest. They wouldn't touch the guns and things—thought them dangerous, I expect—but they carried away all our loose food. Summerlee and I got some rough handling on the way—there's my skin and my clothes to prove it—for they took us a bee line through the brambles, and their own hides are like leather. But Challenger was all right. Four of them carried him shoulder high, and he went like a Roman emperor."

"They got us soon to this town of theirs, about a thousand huts or branches and leaves in a great grove of trees near the edge of the cliff. It's three or four miles from here. The filthy beasts fingered me all over, and I feel as if I should never be clean again. They tied us up—the fellow who handled the ape men like a boss—

—and there we lay with our toes up beneath a tree while a great brute stood guard over us with a club in his hand. When I say 'we' I mean Summerlee and myself. Old Challenger was up a tree eatin' pines and havin' the time of his life. I'm bound to say that he managed to get some fruit to us, and with his own hands he loosened our bonds. If you'd seen him sitting up in that tree holmobb'din' with his twin brother and singin' in that rollin' bass of his, 'Ring Out, Wild Bells,' 'cause music of any kind seemed to put 'em in a good humor, you'd have smiled, but we weren't in much mood for laughin', as you can guess. They were inclined within limits to let him do what he liked, but they drew the line pretty sharply at us. It was a mighty consolation to us all to know that you were runnin' loose and had the archives in your keepin'."

"Well, now, young fellow, I'll tell you what will surprise you. You say you saw signs of men and fires, traps and the like. Well, we have seen the natives themselves. Poor devils they were, down faced little chaps, and had enough to make them so. It seems that the humans hold one side of this plateau—over yonder, where you saw the caves—and the ape men had this side, and there is bloody war between them all the time. That's the situation so far as I could follow it. Well, yesterday the ape men got hold of a dozen of the humans and brought them in as prisoners. You never heard such a jabberin' and shriekin' in your life. The men were little red fellows and had been bitten and clawed so that they could hardly walk."

"They got us soon to this town of theirs, about a thousand huts or branches and leaves in a great grove of trees near the edge of the cliff. It's three or four miles from here. The filthy beasts fingered me all over, and I feel as if I should never be clean again. They tied us up—the fellow who handled the ape men like a boss—put two of them to death then and there—fairly pulled the arm off one of them—it was perfectly beastly. Plucky little chaps they are and hardly gave a squeak. But it turned out absolutely sick. Summerlee fainted, and even Challenger had as much as he could stand. I think they have cleared, don't you?"

We listened intently, but nothing save the calling of the birds broke the deep peace of the forest. Lord Roston went on with his story.

CHARTER NOTICE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that application will be made to the Governor of Pennsylvania on the 6th day of June, 1916, at ten o'clock A. M., under the provisions of the Act of Assembly entitled "An Act to Provide for the Incorporation and Regulation of Certain Corporations," approved the 29th day of April, A. D. 1874, and the supplements thereto, for a charter for an intended Corporation to be called Gettysburg Electric Company, the character and object of which is the supplying of light, heat and power, or any of them, by electricity, to the public in the Township of Straban, Adams County, Pennsylvania, and to such persons, partnerships and corporations residing therein or adjacent thereto as may desire the same; and for these purposes to have, possess and enjoy all rights, benefits and privileges by said Act of Assembly, and the supplements thereto, conferred.

HEADACHE STOPS,
NEURALGIA GONE

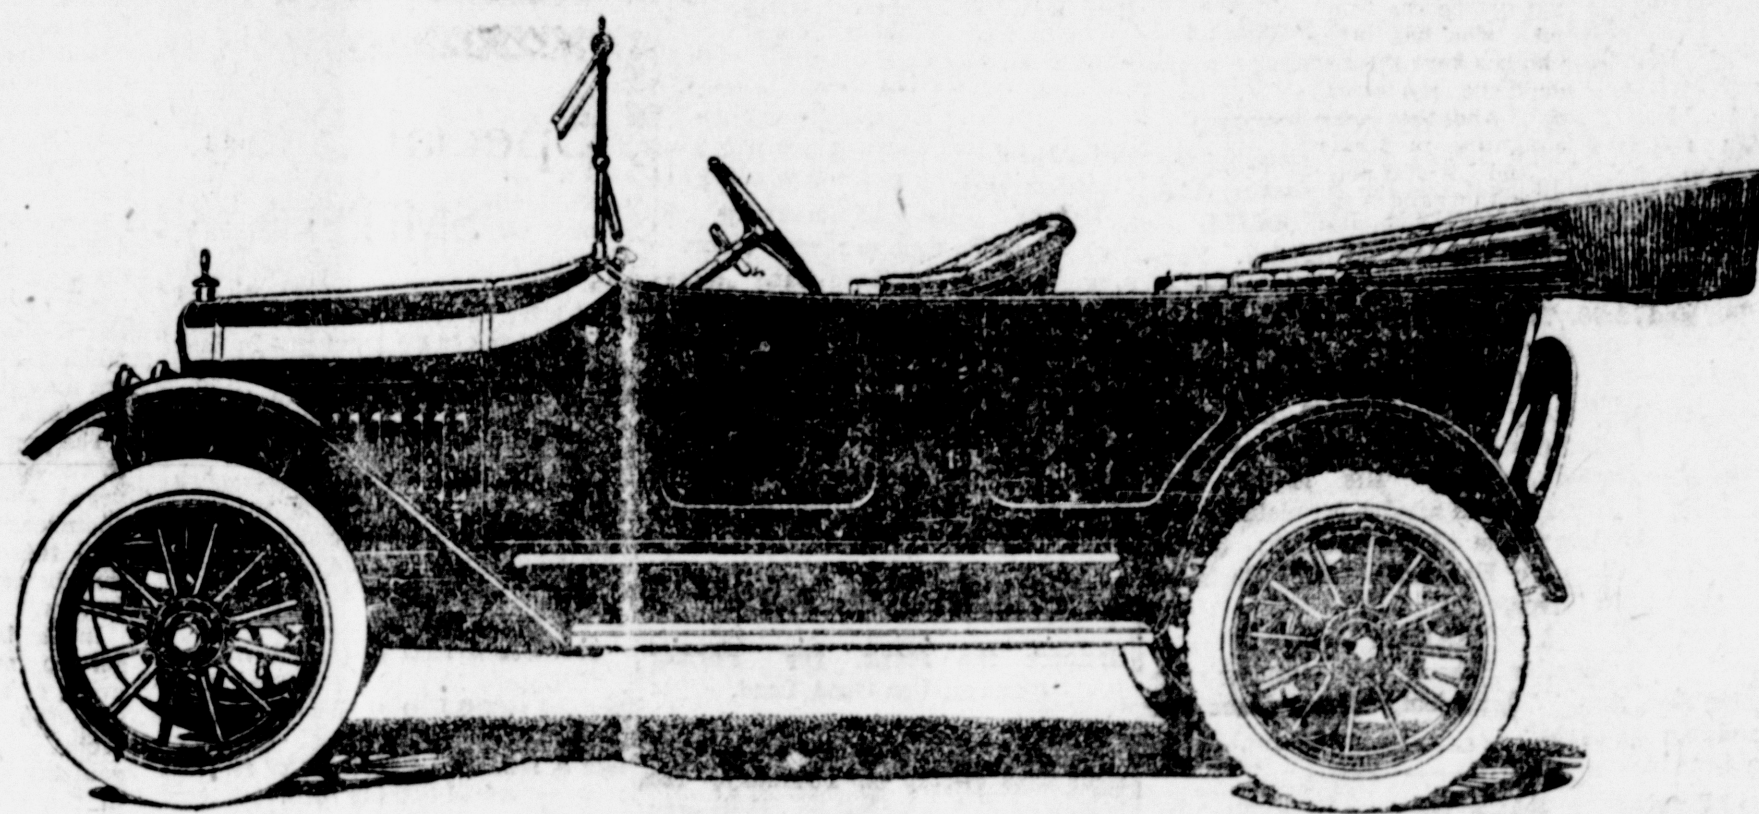

Dr. James' Headache Powders give instant relief—Costs time a package. Nerve-racking, splitting or dull, throbbing headaches yield in just a few moments to Dr. James' Headache Powders which cost only 10 cents a package at any drug store. It's the quickest, surest headache relief in the whole world. Don't suffer! Relieve the agony and distress now! You can. Millions of men and women have found that headache and neuralgia misery is needless. Get what you ask.

DON'T GO TO BED WITH COLD FEET.

Says: "Often Brings on Attacks of Acute Rheumatism."

An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, and people who are subject to attacks of rheumatism should never go to bed with cold feet. A whole lot is being said about taking salts and effervescent tablets for rheumatism and sciatica, but those who suffer sharp twigs and painful swollen joints need something powerful to overcome their piteous suffering.

Any broad-minded druggist will tell you that one-half teaspoonful of Rheumatism taken once a day is driving more rheumatism out of afflicted people than all the salts on earth. Right in this neighborhood People's Drug Store and all druggists sell large quantities of it, and it's the surest and most inexpensive remedy—about 50 cents a bottle.

What Do You Know About The Maxwell Car?

THIS is the time of the year when more people are considering the question of "what car to buy" than at any other time of the year.

This community has its full share of people who will soon be driving their first car or a new car to replace the old one.

Now, we know that we are going to sell Maxwell Cars to a great many of these people—depending upon how many we are able to acquaint with the merits of the Maxwell.

The generous value offered in the car is so evident—its past record is so full of good performance—owners speak so well of it—that when the buyer knows these things, he is eager to buy a Maxwell.

In order to tell as many people as possible about the merits of the Maxwell Car we are going to spend a lot of money in the next few weeks in this paper advertising Maxwell merits to those who do not know them.

The reason—we want to sell as many Maxwells as possible this season. Our future allotments will depend upon how many Maxwells we sell now.

You may know that the Maxwell market is a buyer's market, not a seller's market—broadly speaking. The demand for Maxwells the country over is greater than the supply.

For this reason cars are allotted to dealers by the factory according to the size of the dealer's business.

We want to make a showing and be in a position to get a generous allotment of Maxwells hereafter. Because the more Maxwells are sold in any community, the greater is the future demand. We realize the opportunity to do an ever-increasing Maxwell business.

This is only the first of the several messages we are going to print—a few days apart—concerning the Maxwell Car. But we don't expect to be able to adequately present Maxwell merits in printed words alone.

If you are one who is going to buy a new car you will find it decidedly to your advantage to find out all you can about the Maxwell before you place your order.

Come in and talk it over with us and let us demonstrate the car to you. Then, don't take our word alone, but ask those who now own Maxwells.

Get "posted" about the Maxwell and you will realize more satisfaction and get more "value received" for your motor car money than ever before.

And we are just as willing to have you investigate other cars just as fully as you do ours. The Maxwell will not suffer by the comparison.

Why not start your Maxwell investigation today?

FRENCH WIN FIERCE BATTLES

Gain at Hill 304 and Take Trench at Hill 287.

ATTACK WAS A SURPRISE

Aerial Craft Make Big Raids Along the Western Front and Engage in Many Combats.

London, May 19.—Important gains were made by the French on the west side of the Meuse, General Nivelle's forces carrying a German trench north of Hill 287, and also capturing a redoubt on Hill 304.

These successes were announced by the French war office, which also stated that German attacks in Avocourt wood were repulsed.

The French assault which took from the Germans the trench north of Hill 287 was a surprise attack. Particular mention is made of the fierceness of the fighting at Hill 304, where the Germans fought stubbornly before they were swept from their redoubt by the French infantry.

The German attack in Avocourt wood, which lies northwest of Verdun, was launched after a bombardment of the utmost violence.

A despatch from Amsterdam says 20,000 fresh German troops have been sent to reinforce the Tenth line in the region of Bethune, where hard fighting between the British and German forces has been in progress for some time.

Aerial activity on a grand scale continues over the west front. The French war office announced that German air craft have bombarded Lunerville, Epinal and Belfort, but that little damage was done. Belfort is one of the strongest fortifications in eastern France.

Two French aeroplanes dropped eighty more shells on the railway station at Metz on the night of May 16.

The official reports of the British and French war offices also tell of unprecedented aerial activity on the western front.

In the Verdun sector alone, thirty-three air combats were fought and the British aeroplanes engaged in twenty-seven on their front. Several German machines are reported wrecked and the British have two missing. The French squadron returned safe, Paris says.

Lieutenant Immelman, the famous German war aviator, brought down his fifteenth aeroplane west of Donal.

The American aviators who have been in the service of the French army for the past year, and who were recently brought together to form a flotilla under the name of the Franco-American Flying Corps, took part in the expedition over the German lines for the first time as a separate unit.

They sustained particularly heavy shelling as they recrossed the front. The machine piloted by Lieutenant William K. Thaw, of Pittsburgh, lost part of its tail piece, and the propeller was damaged by a shell, but Lieutenant Thaw brought it safely back to camp. Corporal Victor Chapman's machine was also hit.

Corporal J. M. McConnell, of Carthage, N. C., was flying at a height of 12,000 feet, but German shells burst all around him, showing that the range of the German anti-aircraft guns has been lengthened. Sergeant Elliott Cowdin, of Atlanta; Sergeant Norman Prince, of Prides Crossing, Mass., and Sergeant Hall, of Galveston, also took part in the expedition.

AUSTRIANS PRESS ON

Vienna Predicts Fighting Will Soon be on Italian Territory.

Vienna, May 19.—Alternating bombardments of the most violent character and sharp infantry dashes have pushed the Italian invaders back to the border of Italy at some points in southern Tyrol, and it was confidently predicted here that fighting will soon be in progress upon Italian soil.

As a result of Austro-Hungarian offensive all along the front, the menace to Rovereto has been removed. The Italians in this region have been compelled to fall back in three directions—from the sector of Laginna, in the Adige valley, and in the Astico valley. A severe cannonade of the Italian positions is being carried out along the Isonzo front, which is accepted here as the prelude to infantry onsets against the Italian troops lying in front of Gorz.

There is high rejoicing in the Austrian capital over Austro-Hungarian victories over a twenty-five mile front in the Tyrolean Alps, where the Italians fell back, leaving more than 6000 prisoners in the hands of the victors, as well as many guns and pieces of artillery.

Two British Aviators Killed.

London, May 19.—Lieutenants Selwyn and Bateman, military aviators, were killed instantly at Gosport, in Hampshire, near Portsmouth. The aeroplane in which they were flying dived from a height of 1000 feet. The cause of the accident has not been determined. Both lieutenants were experienced aviators.

Played With Match, Burned.

Moorestown, N. J., May 19.—Walter Ballinger, five-year-old son of David Ballinger, while playing with matches set fire to his clothes and was soon enveloped in flames which badly burned him.

And Some Are Neither.

G. O. P. NEEDS ITS STRONGEST MAN

Leaders No Longer Say They Can Win With Anybody.

WILSON AS PEACE ADVOCATE

"He Has Kept Us Out of War," Is Cry
Heard on All Sides—However, It
May Happen That Our Troops Will Be Fighting by the Time November
Elections Roll Around.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington, May 19.—[Special].—You can no longer hear wise Republicans assert that they can win with anybody. Those who know are alive to the fact that it will take the hardest kind of a fight to defeat Woodrow Wilson and that in order to win they must have a man who can get the votes of the Republicans and unite the party.

If there is a war in progress in Mexico and the possibility of a war with Germany—such possibilities may be probabilities any day—it will require a mighty good man and a close unification of former Republicans to carry the country.

"He Has Kept Us Out of War,"

Republicans are hearing from constituents in all parts of the west the ever repeated phrase when describing Wilson's popularity, "He has kept us out of war."

Would it not be the irony of politics if the man who has become popular because he has kept the country out of war should be re-elected as a war president? And that may happen if there is fighting in Mexico next November. And I would not be surprised to see many thousand American troops fighting in Mexico about that time.

Couldn't Budge Catron.

When Senator Catron was elected a delegate to the national convention from New Mexico quite a number of Roosevelt Progressives gathered around him and told him that if he would support Roosevelt for president they would vote for him and help him to be re-elected United States senator.

"I won't do it," replied Catron. "I won't vote for Roosevelt even if it costs me my election. Roosevelt is not a Republican. His name has no business in a Republican national convention."

Moreover, he went on to say that the way for Roosevelt to come back into the party was as a follower and not as a dictator.

Chairmanship, In Sight.

The Republicans have been figuring that in the event of success next fall they will control the senate. If it so happens quite a number of new chairmen of committees of importance will be found. Among them will be Senator Page of Vermont. He will surely become the chairman of the agricultural committee, although he would have the choice of other important positions. This committee was considered so important by the late Senator Proctor of Vermont that he chose to be chairman of it rather than of military affairs. Senator Page is a hardworking member of the committee on naval affairs and Indian affairs, and it might turn out that he would have an opportunity to become chairman of one or the other.

Giving Them What They Want.

"We are giving the people what they want, what they have been asking for," remarked Senator Swanson of Virginia. "If they want anything more all they have to do is ask for it. We are the friends of the people."

"Rocking Chair Admirals."

Josephus Daniels prides himself that in administering the affairs of the navy department no favoritism is shown. Every man has to take his turn at what is called disagreeable service. Not long ago in rearranging the police force of Washington the captain in the precinct where Daniels lives was sent to the outskirts of the city, a most undesirable station. He spoke to Daniels about it, and the secretary called up Commissioner Brownlow and explained what a good officer this captain was, how well he performed his duty and how glad he (the secretary) would be if he could be restored to his old station.

"Mr. Secretary," replied Brownlow, "doesn't it beat all how these rocking chair admirals roar when they are ordered to sea?"

"I have nothing more to say," responded Daniels.

He had many just such experiences among officers of the navy who wanted to hold soft places.

Will Try Them Out.

Congressman Tibble of Georgia has fought pension bills as hard as he could, but he intends to try another tack. He has introduced a bill to pension every Confederate soldier and every widow of a Confederate soldier $50 per month. He bases it on a statement that $75,000,000 was collected illegally from citizens of the south as a cotton tax during the civil war.

Real Folksy People.

Secretary Daniels and his family are the folksy people of the administration. They are just the same day after day and just the same as they were in North Carolina. They like people, they like their friends, old as well as new, and everybody is treated just the same.

The Kitchen GUPBOARD

EAT DANDELIONS AND IMPROVE YOUR LAWN.

EARLY spring is, of course, the time to eat dandelions, for once this lion toothed weed has lost its youth it is unfit for humans.

The usual way of serving the dandelion is as a green. The leaves must be very thoroughly washed in many waters, for dandelions are usually gathered from the wayside and are even dustier than, though perhaps not so gritty as, spinach leaves. After the leaves are washed put them in a bowl, cover with cold water and let stand for two hours. Drain, add boiling salted water and boil for twenty minutes. Drain thoroughly, chop fine, reheat with plenty of butter and season with salt and pepper. Place in a dish and garnish with rings of the white of hard boiled eggs and sprinkle with the grated or crumbled hard boiled yolk.

For salad dandelions are also useful. Only the youngest leaves can be used for salad, and they must be washed thoroughly and drained. Then they should be mixed with French dressing and sprinkled with diced hard boiled eggs, diced beets or diced radishes.

Bacon and dandelion salad is truly delicious. To make it, wash and drain a quart of the white, tender leaves of dandelions. Season with salt and pepper. Fry crisp brown six thin slices of bacon and chop them fine and sprinkle on the greens. Add a quarter of a cupful of vinegar to the grease in the pan in which the bacon was cooked. Heat thoroughly and pour over the dandelion leaves.

Dandelion Salad.—Arrange dandelion leaves in a circle on individual salad plates. In the center of each plate place half of the yolk of a hard boiled egg, pickling the egg with a silver fork so that it will resemble a flower. Pour French dressing over all.

Dandelion Wine.—Materials: Four quarts dandelion blossoms (good measure), four quarts boiling water, three and one-half pounds granulated sugar, four lemons. Utensils: Large granite pan, jar, grater, bottles. Directions: Pour boiling water over blossoms and let stand twenty-four hours. Add the grated rind and juice of lemons to the sugar. Dissolve on stove, then add to water which has been poured off the blossoms. Let stand in jar two weeks. Bottle, leaving uncorked for a time.

CHARTER NOTICE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that application will be made to the Governor of Pennsylvania on the 6th day of June, 1916, at ten o'clock A. M., under the provisions of the Act of Assembly entitled "An Act to Provide for the Incorporation and Regulation of Certain Corporations," approved the 29th day of April, A. INTERVENTION A MATTER OF TIME?

Administration Man Says Hostilities Cannot Be Avoided.

WAR WOULD LAST LONG TIME

Five Real Battles Would Mark Conflict, but it Would Take Months to Restore Peace and Order—Mexican Politics Has Much Weight in Shaping Attitude of Carranza and Obregon.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington, May 18. (Special.)—According to a man who is in pretty close touch with the administration it is expected that hostilities in Mexico cannot be avoided much longer. Within eight months it is likely that from 200,000 to 300,000 American soldiers will be in Mexico fighting in one way or another.

Of course there will be only a few real battles, but there will be fighting of a kind for years to come, once there is actual intervention. That such intervention is only a question of time and that the United States must fight something like a united Mexico has been inevitable for a long time.

Politics in Mexico.

Two Mexican politicians have been playing the political game and watching every corner. One is Carranza and the other is Obregon. Both know that the popular side is the anti-American side. Villa beat them to it by his raid across the border, but Villa did not have a sufficient following to capitalize his achievement.

Carranza and Obregon have been playing one against the other in dealing with the United States. Each one has been trying to get the better of the other. Each wants to make it appear that the other gave in to the demands of the United States.

The Mexican leaders have taught their people for years to hate the "gringos," and the man who can capitalize that hatred stands the best chance of having a following among the fighting element in Mexico. But while playing politics in Mexico they have afforded an opportunity for creating political sentiment in the United States that may have far-reaching effect.

"Just Supposing?"

Just supposing there are something like 300,000 American soldiers in Mexico in the early days of November? What would be the effect on the election? Would it not be quite likely that the administration, which during a time of war is the government, would be sustained?

"No administration was ever defeated while fighting a war or which had just fought a war." That is what one of the prominent Democrats with more than ordinary political intelligence said the other day. That is something for the Republicans to consider.

Race Issue and the Army.

One reason why James Hay, chairman of the military committee, and the solid south fought the volunteer army plan was on account of the possibility of the enlistment of negroes in the army.

"But this is in the hands of the president," was an argument by a Republican.

"Yes, but something may happen and we will not have a Democratic president," was the response.

The southerners do not want any more negro soldiers.

Had a Valuable Item.

Minority Leader Mann supported the proposition for the Mississippi flood control, which is virtually a proposition to levee the Mississippi its entire length, and said he wished that more great projects formerly in the river and harbor bill could be considered separately and on their merits and thus relieve the river and harbor bill of the charge of being a great "pork barrel" measure.

"I confess," said Mann, "that I have been a party in the past to standing by the river and harbor committee because I had a valuable item in the bill myself."

This was greeted with considerable laughter, for that is the theory of river and harbor bills. Get enough men with "valuable items" and the bills pass.

Farmer Cannon.

There is mighty little of the demagogue and almost no humping about Uncle Joe Cannon. During the consideration of one of the several bills for the benefit of the farmers he said:

"I think I have been as much of a farmer as a great many members here. Some people think I was a better farmer than I was a lawyer, although I practiced law sixteen years, and I can find a whole lot of people who think that I was a better lawyer and a better farmer than I am a member of congress."

Then the octogenarian told the house some facts about the farmers of the country.

Glorious Jersey.

If New Jersey does not appreciate Jim Martine, then New Jersey is ungrateful. I can't begin to tell all that Martine said about Jersey the other day, but it was a plenty. Besides being the home of former President Cleveland and of Woodrow Wilson, Jersey has seashore, crystal lakes, glorious climate, great heritages and many other blessings.

Can Afford to Laugh.

Some people think it is a great joke on a little man to have a big wife, but if the little man loves his big wife, and she adores him, the joke is on the other folks.

A Picture Of Peace

By F. A. MITCHEL

Needing a model for a painting of a female figure I intended to call "Peace." I hunted everywhere for one. I could find plenty of women with suitable figures, but figure expresses nothing that I wanted except symmetry. I painted my picture in my studio, using a model for the figure whom I have often employed, leaving a blank space for the face, intending if ever I found one suitable to my purpose I would introduce it. But time flew by, and I feared the great European war, which rendered my subject timely, would come to an end before I could find a model.

One day while looking out of a rear window of my house I noticed sitting at a window opposite mine a girl whose lineaments were exactly what I wanted. She was sewing, and since the window in which she sat was at an angle with mine I got a three-quarters view of her face. This was the position of my figure of "Peace" in my picture.

I noticed that the girl occupied the same position nearly every morning from about 10 o'clock till noon. It occurred to me to bring my canvas and my implements to my room and use the girl for a model. She would be unconscious that she was being used for the purpose, and this would be a great advantage. So I transferred my materials from my studio to my chamber, and, closing the blinds, so that my model would not see me coming, I set to work. Fortunately I seldom missed getting a sitting each morning.

My picture was a great success. How much its being displayed when the European war was in progress had to do with the public's appreciation of it I don't know. Naturally the war created an interest in it. I spent much time in the gallery where it was hung watching those who looked on it, and noticed that the expressions of all who viewed it were for the time being softened.

But one who listens to criticism of his work will surely hear some fault finding. During these carefree days I heard one adverse comment. Two ladies were viewing it when one said: "She's a spiteful."

"Good gracious!" exclaimed the other. "What do you mean? She is the impersonation of amiability. How could you have got such an impression?"

"I don't know, but I've got it all the same."

They passed on, leaving me wondering how one person of the many hundreds who looked at the picture should have divined such a different interpretation of it from the rest. Surely the judgment of the many was of far more value than the one. Nevertheless the criticism troubled me. Might not others have got the same impression from my "Peace," but left it unexpressed?

However, my picture did much to introduce me as an artist, and my conscience had often pricked me for sponging the services of a model. I modified sending an anonymous note, in closing a check, to the young woman I finally concluded that so refined looking a person would need some preparation for the reception of such payment. I therefore wrote a note telling how I had conceived the painting of a picture of peace, how I had found a model in her and how I had produced a successful work, which I could not have produced without taking advantage of her presence at a window opposite mine. I deemed it proper that she should derive some benefit from my success and humbly asked permission to send her a check.

I had written this note in my room while my model of "Peace" had been sitting in her accustomed seat in her window and was taking up my hat to go out and around the block to leave it at her door, for I did not know her name, when I saw approaching from the rear of the room in which she sat the figure of another girl about her own age. Then I heard the one who had newly entered say:

"Maria, what did you mean last night by taking Johnny Doyle away from me?"

"What did you mean by taking Billy Dunker away from me?"

"I didn't."

"You did."

The voices were both shrill, but that of my model was the shriller. I will not attempt to give the anathemas hurled upon each other by the two girls in the space of a few moments. They soon began to elate each other, and my peace model caught her cue by the hair and was yanking her around in circles when, horror stricken, I covered my face with my hands that I might see no more of the fracas and ran out of the room, closing the door behind me to shut out the shrill sounds.

Since that day I see my picture of peace through different eyes than before. Instead of being a Madonna she is a virago. On that account I seldom look at her. As to the model the morning after my disillusion she appeared again at her window, her Madonna-like face covered with scratches. I met her in the street one day, and I was surprised at a difference there was in it from that which had appeared while she sat in the window. What caused this difference? I don't know. It may have been that the light of the room was softer than that of the street. But why had the single critic I have mentioned caught the real expression? I give it up.

The check I drew to send my model I gave to a fund for mutilated soldiers of the great war.

Real Thing to Strive For.

It is not a question of how much we are to do, but of how it is to be done. It is not a question of doing more, but of doing better. —John Ruskin.

Medical Advertising TWO MOTHERS TELL.

How Their Sickly Children Were Made Strong and Well

"For six years our little girl suffered from a bronchial trouble, she had no appetite, could not sleep and was so nervous we had to keep her out of school. The doctors said nothing but a change of climate would help her. We were discouraged when one day a friend asked us to try Vinol, and after taking six bottles she does not look like the same child. She has a fine appetite, is lively, healthy and well, and Vinol did it all." Mrs. F. E. Hufford, Iola, Kas.

Another child made strong:— "The measles left my little girl thin and delicate, and the doctor's medicine did not seem to build her up. I read about Vinol and got a bottle, and her improvement was rapid, her strength returned and she is now as well as ever." Mrs. E. Linot, Pittsburgh, Pa.

We ask every Gettysburg mother of a frail, sickly, ailing child to try Vinol on our guarantee to return their money if it does not restore her child's normal health. C. Wm. Beales, Prop. of the People's Drug Store.

ON WATER WAGON

Drink Glass of hot water before breakfast to wash out poisons

To see the tinge of healthy bloom in your face, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, to wake up without a headache, backache, coated tongue or nasty breath, in fact to feel your best, day in and day out, just try inside-bathing every morning for one week.

Before breakfast each day drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it as a harmless means of washing from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the blood and internal organs. Those who are subject to constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, rheumatic twinges, also those whose skin is sallow and complexion pallid, are assured that one week of inside-bathing will have them both looking and feeling better in every way.
